

Editorial

Save the Date: 2023 International Rural Nurse Conference

Pamela Stewart Fahs, PhD, RN, Editor

Save the date! The 2023 International Rural Nursing Conference (IRNC) will be back live and in person in Johnson City, Tennessee, July 26-28, 2023. East Tennessee State University, College of Nursing and Binghamton University, Decker College of Nursing and Health Sciences are co-hosting this important conference. The Rural Nurse Organization (RNO) is, as always, the primary sponsor of the conference. In full disclosure, the Online Journal of Rural Nursing and Health Care is the official journal of the RNO. If you are a member of the RNO or a registered user of the Online Journal of Rural Nursing and Health Care you will be receiving emails with save the date information on the conference as well as the call for abstracts.

The 2023 INRC is focused on bringing together rural and remote nurses, other healthcare professionals, educators, and researchers to address the unique and varied health aspects of rural and remote communities focusing on culture/social determinates of health, global health, policy, and interdisciplinary professional issues. The board categories for abstracts include the focus areas of:

- Culture/social determinates of health,
- Global health,
- Policy,
- Interdisciplinary professional issues, or
- Other.

When submitting your abstract, you can choose to have it reviewed for a podium, poster presentation or both. Podium presentations should include information on the finished project.

The call for abstracts is open now until January 13, 2023. The URL for submitting your abstract is <https://etsuredcap.etsu.edu/surveys/?s=3TLYN9NTRWLC44FX> or use the QR code to access the abstract submission platform. I look forward to seeing you in beautiful TN in July 2023.

 Calling for Abstracts
November 22, 2022- January 13, 2023
International Rural Nursing Conference
Carnegie Hotel Johnson City Tennessee
July 25-28, 2023

The 2023 International Rural Nursing Conference is focused on bringing together rural and remote nurses, other healthcare professionals, educators, and researchers to address the unique and varied health aspects of rural and remote communities focusing on culture, global health, policy, and interdisciplinary professional issues.

<https://etsuredcap.etsu.edu/surveys/?s=3TLYN9NTRWLC44FX>

